Holiday Expressions

Holiday expressions are individual to each person and hold a special place in their heart. Every one of us has the opportunity to interpret these expressions and how they affect our personal lives and those around us. We have the gift within to impact each other's lives while creating memories that warm our hearts all year long.

Feel Joy- Pursue a great feeling of happiness and delight.

Have Peace- Find contentment and harmony in our lives.

Spread Love- Show affection for one another whether it be family or friends.

Share Goodwill- Give of ourselves our time, wisdom or talent.

Sing Carols- Raise voices and instruments to show gratefulness for the many gifts we are given.

Be Jolly- Full of cheer and good humor.

Bring Hope- What we dream can be a reality and believe things will turn out well.

Make Laughter- Enjoy life's little moments of amusement.

2nd Floor- Ornament Me

This window is inspired by the holiday tradition of bringing out the sparkly things.

Oh Christmas tree, Oh Christmas Tree, how lovely is your bling!

Whether ornamenting ourselves, our loved ones or our home, we want it to shine divine during the holiday season.

3rd Floor- Do Not Open Until Absolutely Christmas Day

The window is inspired by the Holiday classic, Eloise at Christmastime by Kay Thompson. If you haven't had the pleasure of meeting this precocious five year old, her dog Weenie and Nanny, her mostly companion whom she lives with at the top floor of the Plaza hotel in New York City, you simply must stop what you're doing and jingle out to the nearest book store immediately. Eloise is skinkles and drinkles and trinkles of fun. For the gift of laughter that Eloise gives my family each year, this is for you, Eloise dear. You rawther deserve it.

Santa's Christmas Vacation

Santa is getting a little break from the holiday season as Santa goes to beautiful "Cocoaville". He is relaxing and enjoying some good waves! He takes the time to sit back and relax drinking his Cold Cocoa in the warming sun under a palm tree. Even Santa deserves a vacation sometimes!

Icon for the Holidays

This display has been made using familiar materials such as cloth and metal, but with the exceptions of certain processed plastics. Each toy and toy part tells its own story of desire, compassion, need, or happiness. In addition to the icon of St. Nick, we have included 1,000 prayers written by people from diverse religions. They visually represent that the push into modern times have not been able to solve society's own hopes and personal needs.

Fantasy Fashion

With the holiday season upon us, we reflect on what this time means. Go against the grain this season and do something out of the ordinary. Instead of accumulating more "stuff", donate your gifts to a family in need. In lieu of sharing gifts with friends, pool your resources together and purchase livestock for a poor farmer in Africa at <http://www.farmfriends.org.uk>. Make a donation to gogreeninitiative.org and do good for the Earth this year, instead of yourself. But most of all, remember that each person is different in his or her own way, so embrace that and love him or her for who he or she is. Celebrate the happiness that friends are always giving, make every day a holiday and celebrate just living!

Teddy Bears Love Christmas, Too!

This Christmas scene borrows from the beloved literary classic, Goldilocks and the Three Bears, and moves it into the Christmas holiday! While the Johnsons are out taking care of their Christmas To-Do Lists, the Bear Family takes advantage of their lovely, cozy and festive home on Cottage Lane. Momma and Papa Bear enjoy the fireplace, Christmas tree and homemade cookies while Kayla tip-toes to view the Christmas Village scene atop a table.

Whimsical in nature, with cozy, cottage-style living room decor, this display features an original painting by Christy, artfully decorated gift packages, fun floral decor, and of course, that oh-so-beautiful Christmas garland and tree that always complete any holiday scene! Read and reflect on inspiration buzz words - smile, family, hope, dream and more-thoughtfully placed throughout the room. This window is designed to appeal to the warm and heartfelt emotions inspired by the meaning of Christmas.

Sparklin' Sligh

This holiday window is in honor of Ernest Sligh whose name appears in the beautifully defined bronze window framed corner of the 1927 Greenleaf & Crosby Building. During that time fashionable women came from miles away in chauffeured limosines and private cars to privately shop at Sligh's. Later bought by Sarah and Bryce Barton from

Mr. Sligh, it was the only place in the South, outside of Worth Avenue in Palm Beach, where you could find couturiers' Coco Chanel and Yves St. Laurent fashions directly from Paris, as well as the first Halston "wraps" and Trigere lines. 212 Laura Street is a part of Jacksonville's history. As a salute, we feature a large white paper reindeer with fabric swathed into the clerestory for all to see and enjoy - like we used to do when we gathered snugly into our parents' car and took a trip "into town" to see the windows of the Jacksonville holiday season.

Once again, the windows will tell the story of the season.

Winter- "Past to Presents"

Hipasbury Design wanted to design a classic Holiday window, to be indicative of winter and the holidays. Brian Walsh, owner of Hipasbury Design, creates women's bags and home pillows from vintage 40's and 50's Barkcloth fabrics. Many of these fabrics are indigenous to Florida including hotels in Miami's trendy South Beach area. Brian's window serves as a perfect backdrop to his designs, which you can see on display in the window. Many of these designs can be seen around Jacksonville at the MOCA Museum Shop, Three Layers Coffee Shop and on many women around town who carry his unusual and fun bags. Brian is an eclectic at heart. He loves a variety of kitch, whimsy and classic designs, and he hopes to convey his vision with his "Past to Presents" holiday window with things from the past and present along with some "presents" too.
