

Joseph W. Rogan (Chief Judge)

Joseph W. Rogan is a native Floridian and a lawyer with Smith Hulsey & Busey, a full-service law firm with its office in downtown Jacksonville. His law practice focuses on complex business litigation, including representation of individuals and businesses in a variety of adversarial contexts.

Before practicing law, Mr. Rogan served eight years in the Military Police Corps of the U.S. Army Reserve. He spent ten months of his active duty service as an advisor to the Iraqi Police, where he focused on teaching investigations and operations. His squad served as the liaison for the Camp Fiji Specialized Training Division in Baghdad, Iraq.

After his active service, Mr. Rogan received two bachelor's degrees, magna cum laude with University Honors, from the University of Central Florida and his law degree, with a Dean's Certificate, from the Georgetown University Law Center. He worked as a judicial law clerk to a federal judge before making Jacksonville home in 2014.
