

Aaron A. Glick, LEED AP

Mr. Glick has been a resident of Jacksonville for more than a decade, since moving here from Charleston, SC in 2007. In that time, Aaron has developed a deep passion for urbanism, environmentalism, and sustainability, and a desire to see Jacksonville grow and mature into a competitive coastal city with a high quality of life. As an urban planner by trade, Aaron has worked in the public planning sector as well as the world of not-for-profit land conservation in the city of Jacksonville. Aaron is an original co-founder of TransForm Jax, and in-town advocacy think tank with a special focus on improving the urban core neighborhoods that support downtown.

A homeowner in Springfield, Aaron has served in a leadership position on the Springfield Preservation and Revitalization Council (SPAR) for several years. During this time, he has worked to promote commercial investment along the Main Street corridor as well as collaborating with other like-minded community members to help build an economically and culturally diverse thriving historic neighborhood.

Aaron is energetic about giving back to the community through his newly appointed role as a Tree Commission Board member. Building a healthy and full tree canopy will provide numerous health and ecological benefits, promote stronger and more stable neighborhoods, as well as contribute toward a more beautiful and scenic Jacksonville.
