Program Strategy: Juvenile Prevention & Intervention Services

Program Summary:

Duval County Teen Court and Neighborhood Accountability Boards are the two designated programs designed to provide consequences and services for juvenile civil citations in Duval County. Teen Court is a diversion program designed for misdemeanor offenders between the ages of 10-17. The juvenile defendants come before a jury of their peers who decides the consequences (under the supervision of adult court staff). Teen Court added Neighborhood Accountability Boards (NAB) as an additional strategy to address juvenile crime in Duval County's highest crime zip codes. It offers assistance to elderly guardians who have difficulty commuting to the Duval County Courthouse and provides victim awareness to the juvenile offender. Additionally, it serves as a way to give various community members a voice in regard to unacceptable /unlawful behaviors occurring in their community. These community members assign consequences and services to the juvenile offender.

Successes:

- 1) University of North Florida staff has been added as regular members of the Neighborhood Accountability Board.
- 2) New community service partners added this period include: FL/GA Blood Alliance, Salvation Army and the ARC.
- 3) The new Civil Citation video is being utilized as a training tool for Law Enforcement throughout Jacksonville.

Challenges:

- 1) Dealing with youth who present with a criminal charge but have several co-occurring mental health factors has caused cases to remain open longer as we attempt to locate community resources available to address those issues long term. Many of our usual community partners have lost funding and capacity to service the mental health needs of low income defendants.
- 2) The Duval County School District lost their Chief of Police and the officers in place are unsure of which program they are to utilize for minor criminal offenses. Thus the referrals from school board police have declined. Increased communication with the Superintendent will have to resume next month.
